Diplomats Eye Commie Move Against Tito

Some See Announcement As Sign Of Weakness In Soviet Empire

WASHINGTON, June 29—Western Power diplomats today interpreted the Cominform's repudiation of Marshal Tito of Yugoslavia as a sign of weakness in the Soviet empire.

Officials in Washington also regarded the move as possibly one of the most significant since extension of the iron curtain throughout the Balkans.

There were these developments:

1. High government spokesmen said that the Commerce department may modify its tight controls over exports to Yugoslavia if that country breaks with Russia.

2. Official Washington speculated that Tito already may be in prison—or worse.

3. Vlado Macek, former vice-premier of Yugoslavia, foresaw the possibility that Tito may be replaced by new Communist leaders when the Yugoslav central committee meets July 21 in Belgrade.

TITO'S difficulties were revealed in an official communique of the Cominform—implement of the postwar Communist International—published in Prague. The document declared that the Yugoslav representatives had been read out of the organization following its recent meeting in Warsaw.

The communique charged Tito with "Trotskyism" and with dealing with the "imperialists." There was a guarded feeling that Tito's removal indicated that the Soviet Union has overextended itself and is unable to keep its satellites in line.

It also was taken to mean that Moscow feels so insecure that it cannot allow any deviation from the Communist line as dictated by the Kremlin.

In London, an authoritative

Cold War Tension Easing As Reds Relax Travel Bans

BERLIN, June 29—Russian occupation officials announced today a partial lifting of travel restrictions between the eastern and western zones of Germany.

The Soviets advised border control points to permit residents of the Russian zone, who possess Russian-issued passes, to cross the checkpoints.

Unconfirmed border reports said that the traffic ban easing may be extended tomorrow to include the movement of Allied road and rail traffic into the Russian-blockaded four-power city.

However, the latest Soviet move does not lift restrictions on the movement of railroad trains between zones or that on travel by Western Allies.

THE ORDER in no way relieves the plight of Germans in the western sectors of Berlin who now are being supplied with necessities by air caravan.

A Soviet source indicated today that Russia will end the drive to oust the Western Allies from Berlin if they accept the Soviet "eastern mark" as Berlin's only legal currency.

The Soviet-licensed newspaper Taegliche Rundschau said: "If the Americans, British and French wish to show good will toward the Berlin population and the Soviet Union they will renounce the illegal attempt to introduce the Deutschmark. "All difficulties in connection with this illegal attempt will then be ended."

Travel was halted immediately after the Western Allies introduced the Deutschmark as the new currency in areas occupied by America, Britain and France.

An indication was seen that there will be no early resumption of rail traffic along the single route Helmstedt-to-Berlin line on which the Western Allies moved supplies to the former German capital.

The ADN Agency quoted a Soviet announcement saying that "repairs" will require considerable time.

FOOD AND OTHER SUPPLIES are loaded on an Army transport at Rhine-Maine, Germany, in the U. S. zone, for shuttling into Berlin. More than 100 planes were pressed into service to counter the Russian blockade, which was set up in the Red attempt to force the Allies out of the German capital. In answer to the Russian squeeze, U. S. Gen. Lucius Clay said nothing short of war would force out the Americans.

Mass X-Rays To Be Given During '48 Pumpkin Show

Pickaway Countians will have their first opportunity for free, mass x-rays to determine evidence of tuberculosis during the 1948 Circleville Pumpkin Show.

Officials of the county tuberculosis and health association announced Tuesday it would sponsor a mobile x-ray unit on Circleville streets October 20, 21 and 22.

No charge will be made for the x-ray service. All expenses will be covered by Christa Seal sales conducted each Yuletide by the association.

The mobile unit, which will be stationed at a prominent spot in the downtown area and will be manned continually by competent operators.

Association officials stated an individual could have his free x-ray taken in "a couple of minutes" and without inconvenience.

THE X-RAY will be filed for future reference. In case an individual should show evidence of TB, the association immediately will launch a program of corrective assistance.

Decision to bring the mobile unit here was reached Monday night when the association held a special meeting.

During the business session the association named Robert E. Adkins, local realtor, as secretary replacing Mrs. Cleon E. Webb who resigned after serving for several years. Mrs. Melvin E. Yates of Circleville is president of the group.

Lee Funk of Columbus, field representative for this district from the Ohio Tuberculosis Association met with the group and gave assistance for the proposed x-ray program and worked out details on legislation.

The organization plans to re-draft its board of directors, contact all Pickaway County chairmen and compile an up-to-date mailing list.

A discussion was held to sponsor representatives at the Columbus workshop to take place at Ohio State university this Summer. The course is open to physicians and teachers who are interested in control of tuberculosis.

Big Steel Seen Offering 3rd Pay Hike To Million Men

WASHINGTON, June 29—Administration sources expressed belief today that the steel industry very soon will offer a third round wage increase to nearly a million steelworkers.

One top government official reported that the President Philip Murray was in Pittsburgh yesterday talking secretly with Benjamin F. Fairless, president of U. S. Steel, which generally is regarded as the bellwether of the industry.

Steel is one of the few major holdouts on the third round pay boost pattern, but its resistance apparently was greatly lowered by last week's wage settlement won by John L. Lewis' miners.

The steel company-owned "captive" mines did not immediately sign the contract but said they were willing to meet the wage and welfare fund increase granted by commercial operators to the United Mine Workers union.

STEEL OBJECTED to the agreement on grounds that its union shop clause violates the Taft-Hartley law.

Some government officials believe the industry may have delayed signing the 1948 soft coal contract until negotiations could be reopened with Murray and an increase thrashed out for his steelworkers.

Big Steel rejected Murray's wage demands last Spring and instead announced a price cut. Steelworkers stayed on the job under a two-year no-strike contract.

Meantime, there were these other labor developments:

Dewey, Warren Plot Campaign

PAWLING, N. Y., June 29—GOP Presidential Nominee Thomas E. Dewey and his running mate, Gov. Earl Warren of California, were mapping plans today for an active and vigorous campaign for victory in November.

In the privacy of Dewey's farm near here, the two governors were engaged in their first "real chat" since they were nominated as the Republican standard bearers in Philadelphia last week.

Dewey and Warren will no doubt map out the strategic areas in which they conduct their speaking tours between now and November, especially during September and October when the campaign will be at its height.

Patients Leave Zion Hospital

JERUSALEM, June 29—Thirty patients, physicians and nurses cut off for 10 weeks in the American-supported Hadassah hospital were brought into Jerusalem's Jewish section today.

The transfer was made under supervision of the United Nations truce commission.

Damage to the hospital, which is supported by Hadassah, an American women's Zionist organization and which is Jerusalem's biggest and most modern hospital, was said to amount to many thousands of dollars.

Shelling of the hospital area by the Arabs began after May 15, when the British Palestine mandate terminated.

Housing Problem Shaping As Big Election Issue

WASHINGTON, June 29—The critical housing problem shapes up today as one of the hottest issues of the coming political campaign and blasts at the GOP "private enterprise" housing plank already are exploding.

Veterans' groups are lining up solidly to demand that the Democratic national convention, which meets in Philadelphia two weeks hence, pledge the public housing and slum clearance scrapped by both the 80th Congress and the Republican platform.

Chat Patterson, national chairman of the American Veterans Committee, served notice that the AVC is denouncing the GOP housing plank as "a fraud as far as veterans are concerned."

Educator Quits

WASHINGTON, June 29—President Truman today accepted the resignation of John Ward Studebaker, United States commissioner of education since 1934.

Pickaway County motorists were urged to heed the state death and injury toll warnings and have their cars mechanically inspected prior to the Ohio Traffic Safety Check Program which opens Thursday.

Warnings were backed by proclamations by Circleville's mayor, Thurman I. Miller, and Governor Thomas J. Herbert making the month of July a period for the correction of

Countians Show Little Interest In CROP Plan

Lack of interest in the Pickaway County organization for Christian Rural Overseas Program (CROP) Monday night delayed election of a permanent committee to direct activities.

Only eight or 10 representatives turned out for the first county meeting called for last night in the county common pleas courtroom with Judge William D. Radcliff acting as temporary chairman.

John Boggs, representing the local agriculture group, said it is probable the meeting will be rescheduled in another week or two.

A temporary five-man committee was selected by the group to place the program before local county leaders and call an organization meeting to group activities and formulate a permanent working body.

North China Reds Form Government

NANKING, June 29—The Communist North Shensi radio has disclosed the establishment of a consolidated Red government for North China which will administer the affairs of 44,000,000 people in the "liberated areas" of five provinces.

The broadcast revealed the merger June 15 of the Shansi-Hopei-Chahar areas government with the administration for areas in Shantung, Honan, Shansi and Hunan to form the new "North China Liberated Area."

mechanically faulty automobiles.

During the first six months of 1948, the Pickaway County traffic death toll has vaulted to 16, more than twice the number killed in the county in auto accidents during all of last year.

State Highway Patrolman C. E. Wells said his post would conduct traffic checks in this district during the month. He said they would be "on-the-spot" inspections of brakes, windshield wipers, tires, headlights and tail lights.

Supporting the patrol will be the Pickaway County sheriff's office and Circleville police.

Last year there were 17,431 accidents on state highways and outside of municipalities 12,887 persons were injured. The bureau of vital statistics reports 1,857 persons were killed on Ohio streets and highways last year. Patrolman Wells declared:

"Every motorist has a responsibility to himself and to his community to cooperate in the traffic safety check program. The citizens of this state should cooperate to bring the fullest possible effectiveness to the slogan, 'Today's Inspection — Is Tomorrow's Protection.'"

Green Light Given Truce

UN Mediator's Plan Studied

LAKE SUCCESS, June 29—The United Nations today gave the green light to Count Folke Bernadotte's peace formula for Palestine and staked all hope on general acceptance by Arabs and Jews of the basic "suggestions."

The UN mediator asked the Lake Success headquarters to keep the contents of his draft formula confidential for the time being and said he had made the same request of the Arab League and Israel.

UN Secretary General Trygve Lie communicated the basic principles of the Bernadotte peace document to the 11 members of the Security Council.

A general feeling evident at Lake Success is that the chances for continued suspension of hostilities in Palestine are excellent but that a rocky road still lies ahead of an Arab-Jewish accord.

SOURCES closely in touch with the Bernadotte headquarters assert that the following elements are embodied in the peace formula:

1.—Indefinite maintenance of the cease-fire truce until the general assembly has had an opportunity again to review the

First County Winter Wheat Received Here

Early predictions on Pickaway County Winter wheat now quoted at $2.10 per bushel by the three large grain firms in Circleville, indicates an "exceptionally good crop" this year, wheat buyers declared Tuesday.

First sellers to Pickaway Grain, J. W. Eshelman and Sons and Purina Mills were George Eitel of Circleville Township and John Gifford of Pickaway Township.

Shipments of Winter wheat first appeared for sale Monday and local buyers stated more came in Tuesday with further supplies due to reach the mills this week.

Grain quality was described by officials as "very good." For the most part, they said, the average was running 14 to 16 or 17 percent moisture at a 60 pound test weight.

3,155 Dead Listed In New Report

Aid Is Rushed To Stricken Area

TOKYO, June 29—U. S. Army officials announced late tonight that the known toll from yesterday's quake and fire disaster in Western Japan has thus far reached 3,155 persons killed and 7,732 seriously injured in Fukui and 39 surrounding villages.

This total of 10,907 casualties, not counting the slightly hurt, represented a sharp upward revision of earlier Army estimates and was closer to official Japanese figures.

The latest American figures were issued by the Fukui prefecture (province) U. S. military government team and was relayed to Tokyo through the Toyama and Niigata military government teams.

The AMG team estimated that 1,000 persons had died in the city of Fukui alone.

American officials in the area announced also that 30,721 buildings had been destroyed or damaged in Fukui. These included 6,306 destroyed by huge fires which followed the disastrous earth tremor.

THE TOKYO newspaper Asahi estimated that the casualty toll throughout the disaster zone equals some 16,000 dead and injured. This was the highest estimate thus far published.

George Greenlees, assistant editor of the British occupation forces paper at Osaka and one of the first Allied observers to enter devastated Fukui, asserted some 1,600 persons perished in two theatres. He said "only 400 of 2,000 people came out."

He reported also that "at least" 50 of 250 children watching a movie in a primary school were killed.

American Army teams were engaged in a drive to prevent the outbreak of epidemics, as well in helping the wounded, hungry and homeless. Medical and other relief materials were rushed to the quake zone by air and land.

Cool Condition Seen For State By Wednesday

The weather bureau promises a moderation in the latest heat wave by Wednesday.

Forecasters said the turn toward cooler conditions would be gradual in the wake of scattered rain and thundershowers expected Tuesday.

Another hot day was expected Tuesday, with the mercury climbing between a range of 85 to 95 degrees. By way of contrast, observers said that temperatures would hold in the mid-80s Wednesday.

The weatherman said that cooler air was heading toward Ohio from the west. He warned that a shift from south to westerly winds would result in squally conditions on Lake Erie late Tuesday.

More Children Needed In U.S.

CINCINNATI, June 29—Americans aren't having enough children to keep the country's population from dying out.

Dr. Paul Popenoe, director of the American Institute of Family Relations at Los Angeles, told the opening session of the social hygiene institute of the University of Cincinnati that no major American city has a sufficiently high birthrate. He added:

"One of the major problems of the nation today is to find ways of making city life compatible with family life, since people continue to move to cities."

ONE MAN'S OPINION

Old Bill Green a registered Democrat, has come out against the Republican ticket. He is expected to be joined by many other registered Democrats.

There also is a rumor that several labor leaders who are registered Republicans will come out against the Democratic ticket. It's a surprise like this that make politics interesting business.

The tremendous influence of these men should not be underestimated. Each one of them has one vote in the national election.

I hear the Democrats may pick a vice-presidential candidate from Florida to offset Warren, provided they can get a Democrat after what Harry said about the climate.

His remarks were not intended as a slight, they just took a curve after they left his lips.

North China Reds Form Government

NANKING, June 29—The Communist North Shensi radio has disclosed the establishment of a consolidated Red government for North China which will administer the affairs of 44,000,000 people in the "liberated areas" of five provinces.

The broadcast revealed the merger June 15 of the Shansi-Hopei-Chahar areas government with the administration for areas in Shantung, Honan, Shansi and Hunan to form the new "North China Liberated Area."

Pickaway County motorists were urged to heed the state death and injury toll warnings and have their cars mechanically inspected prior to the Ohio traffic safety check program which opens Thursday.

Mass X-Rays To Be Given During '48 Pumpkin Show

Pickaway Countians will have their first opportunity for free, mass x-rays to determine evidence of tuberculosis during the 1948 Circleville Pumpkin Show.

Officials of the county tuberculosis and health association announced Tuesday it would sponsor a mobile x-ray unit on Circleville streets October 20, 21 and 22.

No charge will be made for the x-ray service. All expenses will be covered by Christmas Seal sales conducted each Yuletide by the association.

The mobile unit, which will be provided by the state, will be stationed at a prominent spot in the downtown area and will be manned continually by competent operators.

Association officials stated an individual could have his free x-ray taken in "a couple of minutes" and without inconvenience.

THE X-RAY will be filed for future reference. In case an individual should show evidence of TB, the association immediately will launch a program of corrective assistance.

Decision to bring the mobile unit here was reached Monday night when the association held a special meeting.

Green Light Given Truce

LAKE SUCCESS, June 29—The United Nations today gave the green light to Count Folke Bernadotte's peace formula for Palestine and staked all hope on general acceptance by Arabs and Jews of the basic "suggestions."

The UN mediator asked the Lake Success headquarters to keep the contents of his draft formula confidential for the time being and said he had made the same request of the Arab League and Israel.

UN Secretary General Trygve Lie communicated the basic principles of the Bernadotte peace document to the 11 members of the Security Council.

A general feeling evident at Lake Success is that the chances for continued suspension of hostilities in Palestine are excellent but that a rocky road still lies ahead of an Arab-Jewish accord.

SOURCES closely in touch with the Bernadotte headquarters assert that the following elements are embodied in the peace formula:

1.—Indefinite maintenance of the cease-fire truce until the general assembly has had an opportunity again to review the

First County Winter Wheat Received Here

Early predictions on Pickaway County Winter wheat now quoted at $2.10 per bushel by the three large grain firms in Circleville, indicates an "exceptionally good crop" this year, wheat buyers declared Tuesday.

First sellers to Pickaway Grain, J. W. Eshelman and Sons and Purina Mills were George Eitel of Circleville Township and John Gifford of Pickaway Township.

Shipments of Winter wheat first appeared for sale Monday and local buyers stated more came in Tuesday with further supplies due to reach the mills this week.

Grain quality was described by officials as "very good." For the most part, they said, the average was running 14 to 16 or 17 percent moisture at a 60 pound test weight.

Cool Condition Seen For State By Wednesday

The weather bureau promises a moderation in the latest heat wave by Wednesday.

Forecasters said the turn toward cooler conditions would be gradual in the wake of scattered rain and thundershowers expected Tuesday.

Another hot day was expected Tuesday, with the mercury climbing between a range of 85 to 95 degrees. By way of contrast, observers said that temperatures would hold in the mid-80s Wednesday.

The weatherman said that cooler air was heading toward Ohio from the west. He warned that a shift from south to westerly winds would result in squally conditions on Lake Erie late Tuesday.

More Children Needed In U.S.

CINCINNATI, June 29—Americans aren't having enough children to keep the country's population from dying out.

Dr. Paul Popenoe, director of the American Institute of Family Relations at Los Angeles, told the opening session of the social hygiene institute of the University of Cincinnati that no major American city has a sufficiently high birthrate. He added:

"One of the major problems of the nation today is to find ways of making city life compatible with family life, since people continue to move to cities."

Kiernan's ONE MAN'S OPINION

Old Bill Kiernan, a registered Democrat, has come out against the Republican ticket. He is expected to be joined by many other registered Democrats.

There also is a rumor that several labor leaders who are registered Republicans will come out against the Democratic ticket. It's a surprise like this that makes politics interesting business.

The tremendous influence of these men should not be underestimated. Each one of them has one vote in the national election.

I hear the Democrats may pick a vice-presidential candidate from Florida to offset Warren, provided they can get a Democrat after what Harry said about the climate.

His remarks were not intended as a slight, they just took a curve after they left his lips.

Judge Ponders Sentences For 2 Guilty Pleas

Edna Tye of Columbus, indicted in the first session of the May term of Pickaway County grand jury, Monday changed her plea to guilty of driving without a permit and was placed on one-year probation.

Her case was one of three preliminary hearings brought before Judge William D. Radcliff in the common pleas courtroom.

The judge took sentences under advisement when Hyram Smith, 27, of Peebles, and Charles Zickfoos of Ashville, pleaded guilty to indictments which were returned against them last week by grand jury.

Smith was arraigned on a forgery count and Zickfoos for non-support of his wife and three children. Sentence of both men will be handed down by the court at a later date, the judge stated.

STILL AWAITING court action after his indictment and innocent plea on arraignment, Robert C. Lilly, 27, of Beckley, W. Va., is in the Pickaway County jail on two counts.

Lilly was indicted by the first session of May term grand jury for drawing a check with insufficient funds and obtaining property under false pretenses.

Indicted with Lilly was J. Corbett Martin of Derby for keeping a gambling room. Martin has not been brought before Judge Radcliff yet for arraignment.

Dr. R. A. Keating, says the boy, given only one chance in a thousand to survive the first of a series of rare operations eight months ago, now has every chance for a normal life. However, he says some plastic surgery may be required when Richard is about six years old. Keating says such births occur only once every 50,000 times.

planes began dropping emergency relief supplies by parachute today.

International News Service Correspondent Frank Emery flew over rubble-choked Fukui in a U. S. transport plane today and told of intercepting a radio message from the ground, stating 4,000 to 5,000 were injured in the city. The message said most of the injured were in serious condition.

Emery's dispatch said he saw from the air how a river had poured its waters into Fukui from the outskirts through huge crevices opened along the stream's banks by the quake.

THE CORRESPONDENT said Fukui and surrounding paddy fields were "criss-crossed" with earth fissures.

Gen. Douglas MacArthur's occupation headquarters authorized the Japanese government to make an emergency release of 1,050 tons of rice for the relief of Fukui and 225 tons for Ishikawa prefecture.

MacArthur's public health and welfare chief, Brig. Gen. Crawford W. Sams, said the heaviest destruction caused by the temblor lay in an area 30 miles in diameter.

Sams added that in Daishoji, 10 miles north of Fukui, seven bodies had been found, and five injured were counted up until an early hour this morning. One hundred houses, about 30 percent of those in Daishoji, were destroyed.

One American airman, Capt. Francis Shipley, was unable to land his liaison plane on the Fukui racetrack because of cracks in the ground.

Returning to Nagoya, Shipley confirmed other observers' accounts that the center of Fukui was burnt out and the houses in the residential districts badly wrecked. He said:

"Walls and roofs of houses littered the streets. Some people were running around. Some were camped in the open fields while others were at an old moated castle in the center of a nearby city where a hospital has been established."

Shipley said he saw two trains—one a nine-car passenger train and the other a 12-car freight—overturned on the outskirts. Other reports said most of the occupants of the passenger train had managed to flee before it was overturned.

LT. GLENN M. Johnson of Eaton, Colo., who also flew over Fukui at a low altitude, reported he saw what appeared to be a seven-story building in the center of the city which had collapsed into a mass of fire-gutted ruins.

Johnson said he could see only a couple of large buildings still standing in Fukui and a pile of smoldering rubble where the roundhouse in the city's rail marshalling yards once had stood. The Colorado flier remarked:

"The city looked like someone had smashed a huge frying pan down over it."

pute before a court hearing Thursday on a permanent injunction.

One of Lewis' district unions was accused today of violating the Taft-Hartley law by forcing employees of four non-union mines in West Virginia to join in the pension strike last April.

A complaint charging District 31 of the United Mine Workers with an unfair labor practice was issued by Paul F. Shupp, acting regional director of the NLRB's Pittsburgh office.

The government charged that officers, agents, representatives, and members had forcibly closed the mines of the Ruthbell Coal Co., the Hartman Coal Co., the Borgman Coal Co., and the George Kefover Coal Co. in West Virginia. Approximately 445 employees were involved.

The NLRB complaint charged that District 31 obstructed the mine exits so that workers could not leave. The complaint added: "As a condition of release from the tension, the employees were required to sign applications for membership in the union."

Public hearing on today's complaint will be held before an NLRB trial examiner next Aug. 10 at Kingwood, W. Va.

BUENOS AIRES, June 29—Richard A. Hansen, 16-month-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Hansen, was back in his Bucyrus home today after an operation April 23 in Columbus to replace his bladder, outside his body since birth.

Dr. R. A. Keating, says the boy, given only one chance in a thousand to survive the first of a series of rare operations eight months ago, now has every chance for a normal life. However, he says some plastic surgery may be required when Richard is about six years old. Keating says such births occur only once every 50,000 times.

planes began dropping emergency relief supplies by parachute today.

International News Service Correspondent Frank Emery flew over rubble-choked Fukui in a U. S. transport plane today and told of intercepting a radio message from the ground, stating 4,000 to 5,000 were injured in the city. The message said most of the injured were in serious condition.

Emery's dispatch said he saw from the air how a river had poured its waters into Fukui from the outskirts through huge crevices opened along the stream's banks by the quake.

THE CORRESPONDENT said Fukui, and surrounding paddy fields were "criss-crossed" with earth fissures.

Gen. Douglas MacArthur's occupation headquarters authorized the Japanese government to make an emergency release of 1,050 tons of rice for the relief of Fukui and 225 tons for Ishikawa prefecture.

MacArthur's public health and welfare chief, Brig. Gen. Crawford W. Sams, said the heaviest destruction caused by the temblor lay in an area 30 miles in diameter.

Sams added that in Daishoji, 10 miles north of Fukui, seven bodies had been found, and five injured were counted up until an early hour this morning. One hundred houses, about 30 percent of those in Daishoji, were destroyed.

One American airman, Capt. Francis Shipley, was unable to land his liaison plane on the Fukui racetrack because of cracks in the ground.

Returning to Nagoya, Shipley confirmed other observers' accounts that the center of Fukui was burnt out and the houses in the residential districts badly wrecked. He said:

"Walls and roofs of houses littered the streets. Some people were running around. Some were camped in the open fields while others were at an old moated castle in the center of a nearby city where a hospital has been established."

Shipley said he saw two trains—one a nine-car passenger train and the other a 12-car freight—overturned on the outskirts. Other reports said most of the occupants of the passenger train had managed to flee before it was overturned.

LT. GLENN M. Johnson of Eaton, Colo., who also flew over Fukui at a low altitude, reported he saw what appeared to be a seven-story building in the center of the city which had collapsed into a mass of fire-gutted ruins.

Johnson said he could see only a couple of large buildings still standing in Fukui and a pile of smoldering rubble where the roundhouse in the city's rail marshalling yards once had stood. The Colorado flier remarked:

"The city looked like someone had smashed a huge frying pan down over it."

pute before a court hearing Thursday on a permanent injunction.

One of Lewis' district unions was accused today of violating the Taft-Hartley law by forcing employees of four non-union mines in West Virginia to join in the pension strike last April.

A complaint charging District 31 of the United Mine Workers with an unfair labor practice was issued by Paul F. Shupp, acting regional director of the NLRB's Pittsburgh office.

The government charged that officers, agents, representatives, and members had forcibly closed the mines of the Ruthbell Coal Co., the Hartman Coal Co., the Borgman Coal Co., and the George Kefover Coal Co. in West Virginia. Approximately 445 employees were involved.

The NLRB complaint charged that District 31 obstructed the mine exits so that workers could not leave. The complaint added: "As a condition of release from the tension, the employees were required to sign applications for membership in the union."

Public hearing on today's complaint will be held before an NLRB trial examiner next Aug. 10 at Kingwood, W. Va.

In Tel Aviv, Col. David Shaltiel, Haganah Jerusalem commander, hinted today that Jews may claim for the state of Israel all of the holy city now under Jewish control.

This development came as the militant Irgun Zvai Leumi and Stern Gang were reported to have joined in favor of a military operation to capture all of Jerusalem, which under the partition plan was to be internationalized.

Egypt, meanwhile, agreed to permit Jewish food convoys to pass through Egyptian lines to get to isolated Israeli settlements in the Negev desert region.

All Ohio Clinic Inmates To Get New TB Vaccine

COLUMBUS, June 29—Tuberculosis, the No. 1 health problem of Ohio's state institutions, came under attack today in the form of a vaccine designed to produce an immunity against the disease.

State Welfare Director Charles L. Sherwood and State Health Director John D. Porterfield jointly announced the program described as "the largest concerted use of the vaccine ever undertaken in the United States."

Known as BCG, the vaccine is scratched in the arm like a smallpox vaccination but is no positive immunity against the disease.

The work starting today at the state institutions is the first phase of a long-range program designed to detect and control tuberculosis among inmates of penal and correctional institutions.

Approximately 11,500 inmates in the four state welfare institutions in the Columbus area will be involved in the first phase of the BCG program. They are the Columbus state school, the Columbus state hospital, Ohio penitentiary and the Orient state school.

PLANS CALL for chest X-raying of inmates at the Columbus state school while vaccination is under way there. X-raying will be underway at the Columbus state hospital.

The program has been planned in arrangements made between the state welfare department and the state health department in cooperation with the United States Public Health Service. The three agencies will carry on the BCG vaccinations at the state institutions.

The program will be actively in charge of Dr. Arnold B. Kurlander, chief of the division of tuberculosis of the state health department.

"Tests have shown," said Dr. Kurlander, "that BCG has improved tuberculosis immunity chances. In the highest test, persons vaccinated have proven seven times more immune to TB while in other cases the test has been at a three to one rate."

"It is our great hope that through an effective program utilizing chest X-ray, vaccination, isolation, and treatment, we will be able to substantially decrease the incidence of tuberculosis which is the number one health program in our state institutions."

DR. KURLANDER said BCG is best described as a "builder of immunity against tuberculosis." He explained that it derived its name from the first letters of "Bacillus of Calmette and Guérin," the two French scientists who isolated the germ in 1908.

The TB expert said that the incidence of tuberculosis among institutional population is about five percent as compared with approximately one percent infection of the outside population. Dr. Kurlander said that after inmates of the four institutions in the Columbus area have been X-rayed and given the BCG vaccination, the work will be extended to include other state welfare institutions throughout Ohio.

Special arrangements were made with laboratories in France and Denmark to deliver by transoceanic air flights the vaccine which will be used in the Ohio program.

When completed, every one of the 40,000 inmates in Ohio institutions will have been given a chest X-ray.

TENSION IN BERLIN

THE western nations are to be permitted no opportunity to forget, for the briefest moment, the explosive nature of the four-power occupation of Berlin. It is obvious that the Russian plan calls for a constant stirring of the troubled situation; as soon as the effects of one disturbance begin to die away a new crisis is produced.

Apparently Soviet leaders have decided that primary attention is to be given to the campaign to make Berlin untenable for Great Britain, France and the United States. The presence of the three western powers in the German capital interfere with Russian plans for the consolidation of eastern Germany. As long as the situation continues a score of Germans and Russians within the Soviet zone is exposed to constant contact with representatives of western thought, western politics and ways of life. Totalitarian ideology cannot endure such contact.

People who hold a sound idea need not fear to expose it to contact with other ideas. It is only the faulty, unsound philosophy which must isolate itself from other ways of thinking.

MAINE PICKS A WOMAN

MAINE Republicans have nominated for the Senate a woman, Representative Margaret C. Smith, who has served 10 years in the House. Being on the Republican ticket in Maine, she can safely count on election. This will make her the first woman senator elected from the North, and the second in the nation. The first was Mrs. Hattie Caraway of Arkansas, who served several terms. She had the initial advantage of having a husband precede her in the Senate, and so profiting by the curious tradition, followed in parts of the United States, of automatically electing a woman to the office filled by her deceased husband. Mrs. Caraway, however, was reelected on her own merits.

Maine used to boast of its first-rank public men. Those were the days from 1870 to 1910 when James G. Blaine was the nation's foremost Republican. Thomas B. Reed was the Speaker of the House by whom all subsequent speakers have been measured, Nelson Dingley drew up a famous tariff law, and Eugene Hale and William P. Fry helped rule the Senate. There has been no outstanding Maine senator since Hale was defeated in 1911. Perhaps a woman will restore Maine's representation to fame.

There are probably enough big and competent men in this world to make a hundred new worlds, but in the words of the poet Milton, "half their strength they put not forth".

These Days

George E. Sokolsky's

The convention device is too primitive to be of continued value. Certainly, the business of selecting a President of the United States ought to be a more serious business, a more sober procedure. Jiggling girls, prancing on the rostrum, hired kids shouting from the balconies, milling men and women who managed to get tickets but representing nothing do not present a picture of calm deliberation.

The various committees of arrangements in the future ought to set up rules which would prevent candidates from filling the galleries with so-called "youths" who are there to cheer and boo and act like fools and hoodlums. There was not one spontaneous ovation and demonstration when any candidate was nominated, nor were all or even most who milled about on the floor delegates. The kids were given assistant sergeant-at-arms badges to get in and plenty got in without badges or tickets. Fun is fun, but a convention to select a President is neither a circus nor a vaudeville show—and all this juvenile stuff ought to cease forthwith and forever. Another disgrace is the agreement by which the convention is prolonged and dragged out to make it last long enough to satisfy the merchants and hotel keepers who put up some money to bring the show to their town. All the doings at the recent Republican convention could have been over on Wednesday if the business had been efficiently managed. But it was permitted to drag and drag endlessly.

Joe Martin may be a wonderful speaker of the House of Representatives but he could not keep this convention in order and moving, probably because it had to waste time to please the hotels. Also, Joe must have had a love for the demonstrations because he let them continue long after they were well over.

Unless you have seen these ovations, you cannot imagine how silly they are. Men and women walk about with their candidate's name or singing his theme song. The Voice of the Sewer at the 1944 Chicago convention may have been ridiculous, but the voice of George Bender singing the Four Leaf Clover song was equally stupid and ugly. It did not make a vote for Senator Taft.

Someone has to break through this silly tradition, for no better word describes it than silly. It costs party managers large fortunes and makes the convention itself ridiculous. It looks like tomfoolery, which it is. Or is it possible that this imbecilic galavanting is necessary to keep the delegates from being bored?

Television will in time spoil all this, but it will never end until some candidate can get himself nominated without it. Senator Homer Ferguson broke one tradition when he seconded Vandenberg without making one of those enormous five-minute speeches that uniformly say nothing but go on everlastingly. He cut through that ice, but as his man was not nominated, it made little impression on the convention.

I am not griping. I am crusading against dopey traditions that hang on because there is insufficient courage to kill them. I am protesting against stupidity. I want to shame the party managers. I want to stimulate anger in the delegates. Maybe it cannot be done. Maybe they like to sweat while a young girl goes through disgraceful exhibitionism on the stage.

THERE are some opponents who will play against your contract in such a way that it seems you are bound to make out all right no matter what you do. If you never went up against any other kind of resistance, you would find bridge a pretty monotonous matter and would have to be a wonder in order to keep yourself really trying to play your best. When against such players, however, the truly able declarer makes certain that the other side gets plenty of chance to perpetrate mistakes in his favor.

Against most opponents he meets, East would not have bid the 4-Hearts, but would have decided to play against the 3-Spades in the hope of defeating the contract, which should not have been too hard to do, judging from the way the bidding sounded. But it was rubber bridge, and he rated the mistake-making tendencies of the particular defenders as worth at least a trick to him. So he reached out for the game.

CHAPTER TWENTY-SEVEN

"I HEAR young Ralph Estabrook is out of the service now. He'll be up here this year with his friends. That ought to be something," Eph commented. George shrugged. "They spend an awful lot of money in my place," he volunteered, "but I earn every penny of it being civil to them."

Andrew shuddered with an exaggerated movement of his shoulders. "Nice neighbors I've got," he murmured. "It's a wonder you didn't warn me, one of you. Of course, I didn't expect Eph to do it—he had a business interest in selling me."

"And the rest of us wanted you to settle here, and were afraid you might be scared off," Cecil said warmly. Because he knew she meant it, Andrew was pleased. Moments like these more than made up for the strangeness of his new life, and the sometimes frightening uncertainties ahead.

By the time they had had dessert, Helen Priest declared they were all in the right condition to sing. "Heavens, no! We're stuffed!" they chorused, but she wouldn't listen.

"I've been dying to try that piano ever since I saw it," she said, "and you're not going to head me off that way. Besides, the tuner was over at our house the other day, and he had just come from here. He called it a whoopee, or something like that."

She sat down on the bench and struck a few tentative chords, then launched into a popular song. Under cover of the young voices which soon joined hers, Andrew and Bigelow began to clear away the dishes. By the time they were stacked in the kitchen, the music had changed to some of the old favorites, and the older guests had begun to gather around the piano and add their voices to the group.

Gloria and Ellery came out of the kitchen and mingled with the crowd, and Andrew was free to stack dishes and sort silverware. Bigelow fussed at him. "Please, Mr. Paul, you go back to the living room. I'll take care of everything out here." And when Andrew showed no sign of going, he added, "You'll only be in the way out here."

Andrew quirked a humorous eyebrow at him. "Is that so? Well, you'll simply have to put up with me, because this is my chance to learn how to clear up after a party. I don't expect to have you with me always, Biggy."

A plaintive sound interrupted him, and he went to the door. Joe sidled inside with an inquisitive upward glance, and a tentative "Meow," Andrew chuckled. "Had you around, and I'll have some supper for you, too." He dished out some of the casserole, carefully taking out the mushrooms, and Joe, after sniffing all around the edges of the dish in a distrustful fashion, suddenly began to eat it with relish.

Andrew forgot all about the cat when he started back to the living room to rejoin his guests. Mr. Woodford was seated in one of the big leather chairs in the library, deep in a book, and looked up over his glasses as his host entered. "You've got some wonderful things here," he said, nodding toward the bookshelves. "I'm going to come around one of these days and really browse, if I may." "I'd be delighted," Andrew said sincerely. "And if there's anything you want to borrow, just say the word." "You're a rash young man," Woodford chuckled. "Especially with such valuable volumes."

"Well," Andrew admitted, "I wouldn't say that to everybody. But I can see you really love them, and that makes all the difference in the world. Are you interested in architectural books, sir? I've got some beauties I could show you."

"Some other time, some other time. I don't want to get you bogged down in here with an old man, while everybody else is expecting you to play host out there."

"Then if you'll excuse me I'll run along and do my duty." "No use letting this go to waste," he called out, as he entered the long living room with the punch bowl. A soft, furry body insinuated itself between his legs before he could take the next step, and Andrew stumbled wildly. The punch bowl flew out of his hands, he made two or three long, lunging steps, and ended up flat on his face. The silver tray crashed to the floor with a clang-sound.

Joe had fled to a far corner of the room. When the laughter died down, he crept out again. He sniffed at the puddle of punch still left on the floor, and his tongue went out to lap it a couple of times in trial. Suddenly he leaped away, his tail went up and he raced around the room.

"Look at him go!" Mrs. Potts cried. "I do declare, I believe that cat's on a tear. I hope he don't get at your embroidered curtains, Andy!—Ow! Help!" Suddenly she was standing up, brushing wildly at her lap. "He jumped on me!" she cried.

"Don't you like cats?" Andrew asked. "Like them? I'm scared green of them! I think they're horrid!" She took a ragged breath of relief. "Oh, the nasty little thing! Why do you suppose he picked on me?"

Andrew looked down at her with a grin. "I think he'd had just enough punch to get uninhibited. And so he recognized that you don't really dislike cats—you're just shy with them."

By this time several of his guests were getting ready to leave and he was busy shaking hands with his new friends and neighbors when he glanced up and found Joan regarding him intently. She flashed a warm smile across to him, a smile that meant more to Andrew than any spoken tribute he had received. He signed with sheer happiness. This was a better life than he had ever dreamed it could be.

The sun lay warmly on his shoulders, as Andrew spaded up the front beds. Beside him, in several flats, were the seedlings he had purchased yesterday at the Brantfield Nurseries. Zinnias, French marigolds, petunias, ageratum, and phlox. The plants looked sturdy, and Andrew had high hopes that they would continue to be, for the soil was good and the climate cool enough to make them strong.

He whistled a little as he worked. In a nearby bed, Joe was studying an angelform, his ears pricked forward, his yellow eyes serious. Occasionally he would put out a tentative paw and touch the thing, then cock his head on the other side and stare at it some more. He had been playing with his shadow all morning, jumping in and out of the lilac bush, and was tired now.

A little breeze ruffled Andrew's hair as he worked. He had never felt better in his life, he reflected even though he was doing his own cooking. With a muttered "That reminds me" he suddenly dashed into the house and returned with a badly burned enamel pan which he proceeded to bury in a deep hole in the middle of the flower bed. "Can't let Mrs. Potts see that," he murmured, then, as he realized he was talking to himself, he turned to Joe. "What would I do without you, big boy?" he asked gratefully. "I can always pretend I'm talking to you."

A large blue Buick went slowly past the house. Andrew was getting used to the fact that people from town usually slowed down when they went past his place "to see what that Paulson fellow has done." Everyone seemed to know, down to the last nail, just what alterations he had made, and commented on them, one way or another.

The Buick stopped, and Andrew looked up. This was no Brantfield car, he realized, and the man driving it looked unfamiliar, too. For a brief moment, he wondered if it was one of his own bowing acquaintances of the old days, and—if it was—just how he would handle the encounter.

But the man who got out and came slowly toward him was a stranger. He smiled at Andrew, and waved briefly toward the end of the house. "Mind if I look at your view a couple of minutes?" he asked.

"Not at all," Andrew went on working, putting his weight on the heavy spade, prying the soil loose, turning it over. Then he stooped to toss aside the ever-present crop of stones he had brought up.

"Why don't you sieve it?" the man asked suddenly, and Andrew started. He had been so quiet since his coming, that he had almost been forgotten.

"Sieve it?" Andrew repeated. "The ground you've got enough stones here to make it worth your while. Take a short section of an old barrel or keg, and nail screening over the bottom. Fill it with earth and shake it—like the women sift flour—and you'll get the good soil coming through, while the stones will stay on top of the screen. Get it strong, though—the screening, I mean—because I see you've got some pretty big stones here."

"Thanks for the tip," Andrew wondered where he would find the necessary ingredients, but the idea sounded good. His back muscles might benefit, he thought ruefully, tossing away another handful of large pebbles.

My New York

By MEL HEIMER

Mel Heimer

NEW YORK—A thorough and expert sports writer named Lewis Burton has, in recent weeks, been giving newspaper readers here an incisive look into the art of bookmaking, with special emphasis on the nationwide activities of Frank Erickson, the Norwegian immigrant who is recognized as the czar of this fabulous, if illegitimate, industry.

There is little I can add to Mr. Burton's revelations about the powers that be, but since I have been a friend, an acquaintance and an observer of countless small-fry bookies, I thought I would try to sketch one of them swiftly, as an integral part of the Manhattan scene. Except in those troublesome times when the police turn on the heat and the bet-takers wearily head for New Jersey or Florida, this city surely must be the American center for wagering on the horses.

The center, that is, of an industry whose annual turnover has been estimated by one New York assemblyman at 20 billion dollars and by one of my bookie friends at five times that amount.

In spite of loud and violent police protests to the contrary, it is likely that one out of every two large office buildings in New York has from three to 50 bookies in and around the premises. These are books like one I know whose right name is not Eddie Mack.

Eddie Mack has a job in a building where I once worked; it is a small, inconsequential job and it doesn't pay him a fifth of what he clears from his bet-taking, although he is only a peanut-sized bookie.

It is no use to talk with Eddie about the ramifications of bookmaking—the gang wars, the violence, the tie-ins with vice and so on. To him, it is a reasonably legitimate trade, and he gets indignant with people who look on it as a shady profession.

Eddie considers the fact that it is outside the law, the only hitch toward recognition of it as a business on a par with stockbroking, selling insurance or running a movie house.

LIKE MOST BOOKIES, Eddie hopes the law WILL one day permit it. That would be the end of the police shakedown, unless desk sergeants and precinct lieutenants can think of some new way to get their hooks into the deal.

Some suggestions have been made to charge say, about $5,000 for an annual license. That would suit guys like Eddie. In many cities, a street-corner bookie like himself makes a rough profit of $600 a week—and pays $200 to the law.

A license would furnish both a saving and a relief from the irritating shadow of an occasional arrest that the law finds necessary to appease the crusading groups. Eddie Mack clears from $300 to $500 a week and he would have a tidy little sum in the bank except for one thing. He plays the horses.

Years ago, Eddie managed a little restaurant downtown. So many customers tried to place bets with him, that he threw up his hands one night and started accepting them. He has been accepting them for more than 30 years. In those 30 years he has acquired a wife, five children, a home in Brooklyn and a lay position of stature in his church.

His "legitimate" job is a clerical one, paying $50 a week. Nearly every person in Eddie's building plays the horses and Eddie gets perhaps a twelfth of the business.

EDDIE, OF COURSE, is answerable to a syndicate of big bookmakers, who go 50-50 with him on his proceeds and who, in turn, make good any big losses he may incur and who afford him the proper police protection.

Eddie has no fear of the law but he does consider it a pain in the neck. He pays it token respect by slipping his call-in slips under his belt or collar or into the lining of his tie, if he thinks there is a patrolman loose in the building.

Eddie is, so far as I have been able to judge, an honest man. This does not excuse him, of course, from the stigma of being in an illegal business.

"Ninety-nine out of a hundred books are honest," Mack claims, hotly. He resents the idea that a bookie might be a bum who is trying to pick up a fast buck.

Eddie conducts his own business in an orderly fashion and appears to think steadfastly that all other books do likewise. Here, Eddie is being naive.

As for horse players—Eddie looks on them with a tired, sad benevolence. "There isn't one in five thousand who will bet the books over a period of time," he says.

"Do you know how many of them know what the heck they're doing? Hardly any. They pour the money down the drain. And I just sit there and let it drop into my hat."

"The Authority on Authorities"

WON'T LET YOU LOSE

THERE are some opponents who will play against your contract in such a way that it seems you are bound to make out all right no matter what you do. If you never went up against any other kind of resistance, you would find bridge a pretty monotonous matter and would have to be a wonder in order to keep yourself really trying to play your best. When against such players, however, the truly able declarer makes certain that the other side gets plenty of chance to perpetrate mistakes in his favor.

Against most opponents he meets, East would not have bid the 4-Hearts, but would have decided to play against the 3-Spades in the hope of defeating the contract, which should not have been too hard to do, judging from the way the bidding sounded. But it was rubber bridge, and he rated the mistake-making tendencies of the particular defenders as worth at least a trick to him. So he reached out for the game.

South scored his spade A and, though he saw the 10 fall from East, decided to repeat the suit, with the 5, not the J. North was sure now that East had played the 10 from the J-10, so stuck in the K, surely setting up the Q in dummy. The 9 would have been sounder play anyway, even if East did win it with the J, as the Q would not then have been made available for the discard of a loser.

East cleared trumps with the K and A and led the club 2, on which South played the 8. If East had now used the dummy's K, he could have discarded a club on the spade Q and conceded a trick in each minor to have his contract. But the 8 tempted him to play dummy's club 9, which the J won. When the Q came back, South played the 10 to let the K win. The spade Q brought a discard of the diamond 8—funny play—and the club 7 was given to the A. South was end-played. With only his spade J and diamonds, he saw the spade lead would mean a discard of the dummy's low diamond and a ruff by East, so he led the diamond 5. This ran to the Q, the diamond A was scored and the established club 5 brought a discard of the diamond 7. Two hearts then finished the hand. You will see worse play, but not often.

CHAPTER TWENTY-SEVEN

"I HEAR young Ralph Estabrook is out of the service now. He'll be up here this year with his friends. That ought to be something," Eph commented.

George shrugged. "They spend an awful lot of money in my place," he volunteered, "but I earn every penny of it being civil to them."

Andrew shuddered with an exaggerated movement of his shoulders. "Nice neighbors I've got," he murmured. "It's a wonder you didn't warn me, one of you. Of course, I didn't expect Eph to do it—he had a business interest in selling me."

"And the rest of us wanted you to settle here, and were afraid you might be scared off," Cecile said warmly. "Because he knew she meant it, Andrew was pleased. Moments like these more than made up for the strangeness of his new life, and the sometimes frightening uncertainties ahead."

By the time they had had dessert, Helen Priest declared they were all in the right condition to sing. "Heavens, no! We're stuffed!" they chorused, but she wouldn't listen.

"I've been dying to try that piano ever since I saw it," she said, "and you're not going to head me off that way. Besides, the tuner was over at our house the other day, and he had just come from here. He called it a whoopee, or something like that."

She sat down on the bench and struck a few tentative chords, then launched into a popular song. Under cover of the young voices which soon joined hers, Andrew and Bigelow began to clear away the dishes. By the time they were stacked in the kitchen, the music had changed to some of the old favorites, and the older guests had begun to gather around the piano and add their voices to the group.

Gloria and Ellery came out of the kitchen and mingled with the crowd, and Andrew was free to stack dishes and set silverware. Bigelow fussed at him. "Please, Mr. Paul, you go back to the living room. I'll take care of everything out here." And when Andrew showed no sign of going, he added, "You'll only be in the way out here."

Andrew quirked a humorous eyebrow at him. "Is that so? Well, you'll simply have to put up with me, because this is my chance to learn how to clear up after a party. I don't expect to have you with me always, Biggy."

A plaintive sound interrupted him, and he went to the door. Joe sidled inside with an inquisitive upward glance, and a tentative "Meow." Andrew chuckled. "Had enough of that fir tree?" he asked. "Wait around, and I'll have some supper for you, too. He dashed out some of the casserole, carefully taking out the mushrooms, and Joe, after sniffing all around the edges of the dish in a distrustful fashion, suddenly began to eat it with relish.

Andrew forgot all about the cat when he started back to the living room to rejoin his guests. Mr. Woodford was seated in one of the big leather chairs in the library, deep in a book, and looked up over his glasses as his host entered. "You've got some wonderful things here," he said, nodding toward the bookshelves. "I'm going to come around one of these days and really browse, if I may."

"I'd be delighted," Andrew said sincerely. "And if there's anything you want to borrow, just say the word."

"You're a rash young man," Woodford chuckled. "Especially with such valuable volumes."

"Well," Andrew admitted, "I wouldn't say that to everybody. But I can see you really love them, and that makes all the difference in the world. Are you interested in architectural books, sir? I've got some beauties I could show you."

"Some other time, some other time. I don't want to get you bogged down in here with an old man, while everybody else is expecting you to play host out there."

"Then if you'll excuse me I'll run along and do my duty."

"No use letting this go to waste," he called out, as he entered the long living room with the punch bowl. A soft, furry body insinuated itself between his legs before he could take the next step, and Andrew stumbled wildly. The punch bowl flew out of his hands, he made two or three long, lurching steps, and ended up flat on his face. The silver tray crashed to the floor with a clanging sound.

Joe had fled to a far corner of the room. When the laughter died down, he crept out again. He sniffed at the puddle of punch still left on the floor, and his tongue went out to lap it a couple of times in trial. Suddenly he leaped away, his tail went up and he raced around the room.

"Look at him go!" Mrs. Potts cried. "I do declare, I believe that cat's on a tear. I hope he don't get into your embroidered curtains, Andy!—Ow! Help!" Suddenly she was standing up, brushing wildly at her lap. "He jumped on me!" she cried.

"Don't you like cats?" Andrew asked.

"Like them! I'm scared green of them! I think they're horrid!" She took a ragged breath of relief. "Oh, the nasty little thing! Why do you suppose he picked on me?"

Andrew looked down at her with a grin. "I think he'd had just enough punch to get uninhibited. And so he recognized that you don't really dislike cats—you're just shy with them."

By this time several of his guests were getting ready to leave, and he was busy shaking hands with his new friends and neighbors when he glanced up and found Joan regarding him intently. She flashed a warm smile across to him, a smile that meant more to Andrew than any spoken tribute he had received. He sighed with sheer happiness. This was a better life than he had ever dreamed it could be.

The sun lay warmly on his shoulders, as Andrew spaded up the front beds. Beside him, in several flats, were the seedlings he had purchased yesterday at the Brandfield Nurseries. Zinnias, French marigolds, petunias, ageratum, and phlox. The plants looked sturdy, and Andrew had high hopes that they would continue to be, for the soil was good and the climate cool enough to make them strong.

He whistled a little as he worked. In a nearby bed, Joe was studying an angleworm, his ears pricked forward, his yellow eyes serious. Occasionally he would put out a tentative paw and touch the thing, then cock his head on the other side and stare at it some more. He had been playing with his shadow all morning, jumping in and out of the lilac bush, and was tired now.

A little breeze ruffled Andrew's hair as he worked. He had never felt better in his life, he reflected, even though he was doing his own cooking. With a muttered "The reminds me" he suddenly dashed into the house and returned with a badly burned enamel pan which he proceeded to bury in a deep hole in the middle of the flower that. "Can't let Mrs. Potts see that," he murmured, then, as he realized he was talking to himself, he turned to Joe. "What would I do without you, big boy?" he asked gratefully. "I can always pretend I'm talking to you."

A large blue Buick went slowly past the house. Andrew was getting used to the fact that people from town usually slowed down when they went past his place "to see what that Paulson fellow has done." Everyone seemed to know, down to the last nail, just what alterations he had made, and commented on them, one way or another.

The Buick stopped, and Andrew looked up. This was no Brandfield car, he realized, and the man driving it looked unfamiliar, too. For a brief moment, he wondered if it was one of his own bowing acquaintances of the old days, and—if it was—just how he would handle the encounter.

But the man who got out and came slowly toward him was a stranger. He smiled at Andrew, and waved briefly toward the end of the house. "Mind if I look at your view a couple of minutes?" he asked.

"Not at all," Andrew went on working, putting his weight on the heavy spade, prying the soil loose, turning it over. Then he stooped to toss aside the ever-present crop of stones he had brought up.

"Why don't you sieve it?" the man asked suddenly, and Andrew started. He had been so quiet since his coming, that he had almost been forgotten.

"Sieve it?" Andrew repeated. "The ground, you've got enough stones here to make it worth your while. Take a short section of an old barrel or keg, and nail screening over the bottom. Fill it with earth and shake it—like the women sift flour—and you'll get the good soil coming through, while the stones will stay on top of the screen. Get it strong, though—the screening, I mean—because I see you've got some pretty big stones here."

"Thanks for the tip," Andrew wondered where he would find the necessary ingredients, but the idea sounded good. His back muscles might benefit, he thought ruefully, tossing away another handful of large pebbles.

My New York

By MEL HEIMER

NEW YORK—A thorough and expert sports writer named Lewis Burton has, in recent weeks, been giving newspaper readers here an incisive look into the art of bookmaking, with special emphasis on the nationwide activities of Frank Erickson, the Norwegian immigrant who is recognized as the czar of this fabulous, if illegitimate, industry.

There is little I can add to Mr. Burton's revelations about the powers that be, but since I have been a friend, an acquaintance and an observer of countless small-fry bookies, I thought I would try to sketch one of them swiftly, as an integral part of the Manhattan scene. Except in those troublesome times when the police turn on the heat and the bet-takers wearily head for New Jersey or Florida, this city surely must be the American center for wagering on the horses.

The center, that is, of an industry whose annual turnover has been estimated by one New York assemblyman at 20 billion dollars and by one of my bookie friends at five times that amount.

In spite of loud and violent police protests to the contrary, it is likely that one out of every two large office buildings in New York has from three to 50 bookies in and around the premises. These are bookies like one I know whose right name is not Eddie Mack.

Eddie Mack has a job in a building where I once worked; it is a small, inconsequential job and it doesn't pay him a fifth of what he clears from his bet-taking, although he is only a peanut-sized bookie.

It is no use to talk with Eddie about the ramifications of bookmaking—the gang wars, the violence, the ties-in with vice and so on. To him, it is a reasonably legitimate trade, and he gets indignant with people who look on it as a shady profession.

Eddie considers the fact that it is outside the law, the only hitch toward recognition of it as a business on a par with stockbroking, selling insurance or running a movie house.

LIKE MOST BOOKIES, Eddie hopes the law WILL one day permit it. That would be the end of the police shakedown, unless desk sergeants and precinct lieutenants can think of some new way to get their hooks into the deal.

Some suggestions have been made to charge say, about $5,000 for an annual license. That would suit guys like Eddie. In many cities, a street-corner bookie like himself makes a rough profit of $800 a week—and pays $200 to the law.

A license would furnish both a saving and a relief from the irritating shadow of an occasional arrest that the law finds necessary to appease the crusading groups. Eddie Mack clears from $300 to $500 a week and he would have a tidy little sum in the bank except for one thing. He plays the horses.

Years ago, Eddie managed a little restaurant downtown. So many customers tried to place bets with him, that he threw up his hands one night and started accepting them. He has been accepting them for more than 30 years. In those 30 years he has acquired a wife, five children, a home in Brooklyn and a lay position of stature in his church.

His "legitimate" job is a clerical one, paying $50 a week. Nearly every person in Eddie's building plays the horses and Eddie gets perhaps a twelfth of the business.

EDDIE, OF COURSE, is answerable to a syndicate of big bookmakers, who go 50-50 with him on his proceeds and who, in turn, make good any big losses he may incur and who afford him the proper police protection.

Eddie has no fear of the law but he does consider it a pain in the neck. He pays it token respect by slipping his call-in slips under his belt or collar or into the lining of his tie, if he thinks there is a patrolman loose in the building.

Eddie is, so far as I have been able to judge, an honest man. This does not excuse him, of course, from the stigma of being in an illegal business.

"Ninety-nine out of a hundred books are honest," Mack claims, hotly. He resents the idea that a bookie might be a bum who is trying to pick up a fast buck.

Eddie conducts his own business in an orderly fashion and appears to think steadfastly that all other books do likewise. Here, Eddie is being naive.

As for horse players—Eddie looks on them with a tired, sad benevolence. "There isn't one in five thousand who will bet the books over a period of time," he says.

"Do you know how many of them know what the heck they're doing? Hardly any. They pour the money down the drain. And I just sit there and let it drop into my hat."

Kindergarten Backers Select Community Center For Bridge, Euchre Party

Event Booked For July 15

Community center of St. Joseph's Catholic church has been decided upon as the site for a card party to benefit the Circleville Kindergarten Association. Mrs. Raymond Goetting and Mrs. Henry Schroeder were responsible for the selection. The benefit bridge and euchre party for both men and women will take place the evening of July 15.

Purpose of the party is to secure funds to help defray expenses in order that preschool children of Circleville and the surrounding communities may attend kindergarten.

Mrs. Ray W. Davis is president of the association. Those working with her on the project are Mrs. Fred Grant, Mrs. Charles J. Schneider, Mrs. Emmett W. Barnhart, Mrs. Ned B. Miner, Mrs. Emmett Wood, Mrs. L. E. Williams, Mrs. Paul C. Routhahn, Mrs. Ned Hitchcock, Mrs. Goetting and Mrs. Schroeder.

Prizes will be awarded those having high scores and refreshments will be served.

Now's The Time To Replace Those Screens

Now that Summer is officially here, there are the usual pests, flies, mosquitoes, and other bugs to aggravate you.

Screens are in order and a re-screening procedure is simple, if the old ones are in need of repair.

If they do need replacing and you are handy with a hammer, it is no difficult job. Experts suggest setting up a home workshop and do the job yourself.

You can get window and door frames in the required sizes through your local carpenter or lumber dealer; then select a good screen cloth, and set to work with scissors and tacks or staples.

One of the newest materials for this job is a lumite plastic screening which is rustproof, stainproof and has the color impregnated so that it never requires painting and can be kept clean with a damp cloth.

First, cut the screen cloth with your scissors to fit the frame, allowing enough material at cut edges to turn a hem as wide as the molding you'll back on later. Fold this hem on the cut edges for reinforcement.

Next, tack or staple the screening to the frame, placing tacks or staples an inch and a half apart. Begin at the top, then do the bottom, and the two sides last. To insure a perfect fit, and a neat-looking job, be sure to stretch the screening evenly taut before stapling or tacking the bottom and the final side.

Finish by tacking a molding over the hem to give added strength and a professional appearance.

Picnic Season Returns Again; Tips Detailed

The picnic season is back again, bigger and better than ever in Pickaway County according to those who have been taking their meals out of doors.

As Summer really gets on the job everywhere, the whole land will be packing the picnic provender, taking the family car and making for their favorite picnic spot, or starting a search for a new site.

Baked beans go to the party and are heated in the same fat jars in which they were brought; sandwich spreads are ready in handy jars, drinks go along in thermos jars, salads are kept cold in jars wrapped in damp cloth and brown paper; vacuum jugs keep that necessary coffee hot and fresh for hours. It does take some planning and preparing, but if folks pitch in, that's part of the picnic fun.

For a picnic punch, combine 4 c. (one quart) unsweetened pineapple juice, 4 c. orange juice (fresh or canned), one c. lemon juice, 5 c. fresh or canned grapefruit juice with juice from 15-oz. bottle maraschino cherries. Add thinly sliced maraschino cherries, and sugar, if desired. Chill thoroughly. Pour into thermos jugs just before leaving, adding cracked ice in jug. Makes approximately 3 to 4 quarts of picnic punch, the sort of thing that is a special.

If there is a barbecue pit or grill at the picnic spot, then serve up some barbecued steaks if you want to spurge a bit. Melt 2 tbsp. table fat, add one minced onion; cook over medium heat for 3 min. Stir in 2 tbsp. vinegar, 3 tbsp. lemon juice, one c. catsup, one c. water, 2 tbsp. Worcestershire sauce, 1/2 tsp. minced celery, 1/2 tsp. dry mustard, 2 tsp. brown sugar, 1/2 tsp. cayenne pepper and tsp. chili powder. Simmer until sauce is thick—about 20 min. Store in jar until wanted, and tote to picnic place. When ready to cook steaks, dip each in sauce, then cook over pit or grill. Makes about 2 c. sauce.

Kindergarten Backers Select Community Center For Bridge, Euchre Party

Event Booked For July 15

Community center of St. Joseph's Catholic church has been decided upon as the site for a card party to benefit the Circleville Kindergarten Association.

Mrs. Raymond Goetting and Mrs. Henry Schroeder were responsible for the selection. The benefit bridge and euchre party for both men and women will take place the evening of July 15.

Purpose of the party is to secure funds to help defray expenses in order that preschool children of Circleville and the surrounding communities may attend kindergarten.

Mrs. Ray W. Davis is president of the association. Those working with her on the project are Mrs. Fred Grant, Mrs. Charles J. Schneider, Mrs. Emmett W. Barnhart, Mrs. Ned B. Miller, Mrs. Emmett Wood, Mrs. L. E. Williams, Mrs. Paul C. Routzahn, Mrs. Ned Hitchcock, Mrs. Goetting and Mrs. Schroeder.

Prizes will be awarded those having high scores and refreshments will be served.

Now's The Time To Replace Those Screens

Now that Summer is officially here, there are the usual pests, flies, mosquitoes, and other bugs to aggravate you.

Screens are in order and a re-screening procedure is simple. If the old ones are in need of repair.

If they do need replacing and you are handy with a hammer, it is no difficult job. Experts suggest setting up a home workshop and do the job yourself.

You can get window and door frames in the required sizes through your local carpenter or lumber dealer; then select a good screen cloth, and set to work with scissors and tacks or staples.

One of the newest materials for this job is a lumite plastic screening which is rust proof, stainproof and has the color impregnated so that it never requires painting and can be kept clean with a damp cloth.

First, cut the screen cloth with your scissors to fit the frame, allowing enough material at cut edges to turn a hem as wide as the molding you'll stick on later. Fold this hem on the cut edges for re-enforcement.

Next, tack or staple the screening to the frame, placing tacks or staples an inch and a half apart. Begin at the top, then do the bottom, and the two sides last. To insure a perfect fit, and a neat-looking job, be sure to stretch the screening evenly taut before stapling or tacking the bottom and the final side.

Finish by tacking a molding over the hem to give added strength and a professional appearance.

Picnic Season Returns Again; Tips Detailed

The picnic season is back again, bigger and better than ever in Pickaway County according to those who have been taking their meals out of doors.

As Summer really gets on the job everywhere, the whole land will be packing the picnic provender, taking the family car and making for their favorite picnic spot, or starting a search for a new site.

Baked beans go to the party and are heated in the same fat jars in which they were brought; sandwich spreads are ready in handy jars, drinks go along in thermos jars, salads are kept cold in jars wrapped in damp cloth and brown paper; vacuum jugs keep that necessary coffee hot and fresh for hours. It does take some planning and preparing, but if folks pitch in, that's part of the picnic fun.

For a picnic punch, combine 4 c. (one quart) unsweetened pineapple juice, 4 c. orange juice (fresh or canned), one c. lemon juice, 5 c. fresh or canned grapefruit juice with juice from 15-oz. bottle maraschino cherries. Add thinly sliced maraschino cherries, and sugar, if desired. Chill thoroughly. Pour into thermos jugs just before leaving, adding cracked ice in jug. Makes approximately 3 to 4 quarts of picnic punch, the sort of thing that is a special.

If there is a barbecue pit or grill at the picnic spot, then serve up some barbecued steaks if you want to spurge a bit. Melt 2 tbs. table fat, add one minced onion; cook over medium heat for 3 min. Stir in 2 tbs. vinegar, 3 tbs. lemon juice, one c. catsup, one c. water, 2 tbs. Worcestershire sauce, 1/2 c. minced celery, 1/2 tbs. dry mustard, 2 tbs. brown sugar, 1/2 tsp. cayenne pepper and tsp. chili powder. Simmer until sauce is thick—about 20 min. Store in jar until wanted, and tote to picnic place. When ready to cook steaks, dip each in sauce, then cook over pit or grill. Makes about 2 c. sauce.

In the regular Circleville Night Softball League game following the Scouters' game, Isalys notched an 8-3 victory over Mumaws. Mumaws has dropped the last four games.

ISALYS team was the first to break into the scoring column of Monday night's game, posting a single tally in the last of the first inning to gain the lead.

In the fourth frame, Mumaws advanced to the lead in the game by scoring a brace of runs to make the score 2-1. The lead changed hands again in the next inning however, when Isalys duplicated the two-run feat to lead again.

Last score of the game was made in the Mumaw half of the seventh inning when the aggregation squeezed in a single marker, giving the 8-3 final.

Major's Coughing Up Big Bonuses For Youngsters Entering Game

NEW YORK, June 29—Pitchers are at an extremely high premium in the major leagues today.

Recently Cleveland shelled out approximately $100,000 for a Sam Zoldak, who always was a loser with the St. Louis Browns.

Today comes an epidemic of big league clubs coughing up huge bonuses for college players.

The Boston Red Sox, outbidding the New York Yankees, are reported to have given Frank Quinn, Yale mound ace, at least $50,000 for signing with them.

Wally Hood, son of the old Brooklyn Dodger outfielder, probably will turn down an offer of a $40,000 bonus from the Boston Braves to accept another bid from the Yankees. He is the star pitcher of the Southern California team, best college nine in the country.

The Phillies are said to have paid $25,000 for Stan Hollmig, a gained fame at Texas A and M.

THE PHILS previously set a record by giving Curt Simmons, schoolboy pitcher, $60,000 for signing on the dotted line.

These fellows, before even reporting to a big league team or one of their farms, are receiving more money, in bonus form, than the average working man can earn in 10 years or more. They are sure of meat on their table for years to come even if they don't make good in baseball.

Brooklyn's Dodgers also gave a bonus to sign up Bob Wakefield, University of Illinois star, for their St. Paul farm.

Wakefield is a younger brother of Dick, the Detroit outfielder who got approximately $50,000 when he signed with the Tigers. The bonus idea certainly has been a breadwinner for that family.

Dr. Stanton Due For Big Race

CHICAGO, June 29—Dr. Stanton, winner of the $10,000 Chicago Pacing Derby last year, is the first horse named for the third renewal of that rich harness racing stake at Maywood Park July 9.

Dr. Stanton, known as the Cinderella horse, set a world record for a mile and a quarter at Santa Anita last May 8 when he captured the $10,000 Challenge Pace over Indian Land, victor the week before over Dr. Stanton in the $50,000 Golden West Pace. Time for the record shattering performance was 2:31.

STREAKING TO PENNANT? Fans Watch Key Series Between Bosox Yankees

NEW YORK, June 29—The key series of the American League pennant race to date will start at Yankee Stadium tonight. The Boston Red Sox will meet the Yankees in the opener of three games.

The series could result in one club or the other fueling up with a fresh supply of hustle and breaks that will enable it to streak like a jet-propelled thing right on to the championship.

The Red Sox, now piloted by that old former Yank, Joe McCarthy, and powered by Ted Williams' .415 batting average, have won 17 out of their last 22 games.

This has pulled them from 11½ games out of the lead to a deficit of only 5½, and the fur is still flying, pending further notice on what the Yanks may or may not do.

The latter club meanwhile has won eight out of 10, and like the Red Sox, has been doing the bulk of its recent winning in the west.

CLEVELAND probably is out of it too, although it still clings to a lead acquired before the Yankees and Red Sox started rolling.

The Indians' fortunes depend largely upon Robert Feller, the businessman who now pitches baseball as a sideline—and pitches accordingly.

The Philadelphia Athletics are in a virtual tie with the Indians for the top, but this strange assortment of talent can't keep on forever.

The race thus shapes up as a tussle between the Yankees and the Red Sox, with Cleveland, Philadelphia and Detroit scuffling for the other two first division berths.

As the Red Sox came into the stadium to face the defending champions, both clubs are in top shape and traveling that way. The Yankees, according to all reports, are fielding better than ever and hitting with impressive authority.

Joe DiMaggio joined in the festivities by hitting four home runs the past week, while Williams was getting three for the Red Sox.

Williams currently leads both major leagues in hitting with his .415, and his nearest pursuer is Stan Musial, the St. Louis Cardinal wonder man, who leads the National with .405.

Williams also leads both leagues in runs batted in, with DiMaggio second. DiMaggio leads in homeruns. He has 18, Ken Keltner of Cleveland, 17, and who do you think comes next? Williams, of course, with 16.

Wall Streeters Seeking Talent

NEW YORK, June 29—A syndicate of Wall Street brokers today commissioned Manny Seamon, trainer of Joe Louis, to recruit young heavyweight boxers with latent talent.

Seamon will train the most likely candidates as possible contenders for the title vacated by the Brown Bomber.

Louis, faithful to his promise to retire as heavyweight champion after knocking out Joe Walcott last Friday night, said he would make the act official next week. He will tender letters announcing the fact to the New York State Athletic Commission and the National Boxing Association, the two controlling bodies of boxing.

Local Trotter Pays High Return

Lee Stone, trotter owned by Porter Martin of Pickaway County, won the first race at Hilliard Raceway Monday night and paid the best price of the meeting thus far.

Driven by young Lou Huber Jr., Lee Stone was out front in a hurry and held the lead throughout the mile maiden trot. Purse was $400 and Lee Stone paid his backers $65.80, 19.40, 4.60.

County Given $2,200 Quota Toward 4-H Club Foundation

State Plans Fund For Education

Local Campaign To End Sept. 1

Pickaway County 4-H Club members this week set their sights on the county's $2,200 quota to be raised as a part of the state goal of $200,000 for the Ohio 4-H Club foundation drive which begins here July 1.

Purpose of the campaign is to further the training of Ohio 4-H Club members and advisers in conferences, fellowship trips, leadership and other educational events.

To head Pickaway County's drive are:

C. V. Neal, Orient Route 1, chairman; Mrs. Leslie Dearth, Kingston Route 1, vice-chairman; and L. A. Best, agricultural agent, secretary-treasurer.

Officers of the county 4-H advisory committee declared the money will not be solicited from businessmen in Circleville and other communities but will be raised through individual club programs.

COMMITTEEMEN said they felt that 4-H Club members and citizens of Pickaway County should meet the $2,200 goal by Sept. 1 themselves, without calling on businessmen who have been tapped so many times already for special donations and contributions.

All money from the two-month drive will go into the state treasury and will draw interest at a six percent rate. The principal will not be used, officials declared. Interest alone is expected to be sufficient to sponsor the educational program planned for members and advisers.

The funds will be administered by a committee composed of the dean of the Ohio state university college of agriculture, state 4-H Club leader, director of extension work, representative extension agents and 4-H Club advisers.

A breakdown of the $2,200 county goal means approximately $4.50 per member. Officials are calling for countywide support for the betterment of the rural youth in this county.

He is Roger Greenwood Grigg who was born in Circleville a few days ago to Mr. and Mrs. Edward G. Grigg. He is their third son. The other "junior vice-presidents" are John, 4, and George, 3.

The elder Grigg, who is the general manager of the Circleville branch plant of GE, and his family plan to move to Circleville in the near future—or "as soon as housing permits."

The GE official is caught between the house rental shortage for those of moderate means and the high cost of new homes.

CINCINNATI, June 29 — A "one-man crime wave" from Louisville, Ky., was in Cincinnati prison today following his capture by a posse of farmers.

In addition he admitted several burglaries and robberies during the past three weeks.

Authorities stated Davis' weekend activities began when a night watchman interrupted him during an attempted holdup of the Central YMCA in Cincinnati.

Thereafter, the Kentuckian: Commandeered two taxi cabs, robbing the drivers and forcing one of them to accompany him;

WRECKED the second cab and eluded police by hurdling a wall and plunging down a steep embankment into a creek;

Forced Kermit D. Woolridge to drive him in search of a doctor and was temporarily subdued by Woolridge and a truck driver;

Escaped again, hid in a woods, but was apprehended by the posse when he attempted to thumb a ride.

Cincinnati detectives recovered $645 worth of stolen jewelry from Davis' apartment.

Kiwanians Hear Logan Quartets At Country Club

Representing one of the largest turnouts in many months, Circleville Kiwanis Club Monday evening held one of its periodical "ladies' nights" and treated the fairer sex with a chicken dinner and a musical program at Pickaway Country Club.

Featured were entertainers of Logan Kiwanis Club who brought along a double male quartet of the Logan Isaac Walton League chorus.

The program was virtually the same which the Hocking County organization presented early in May in an exchange program between the two clubs.

Monday evening's program featured two separate quartets which later combined. Between numbers, various solos were presented.

The program was directed by Ralph Poston, baritone on the first quartet.

OTHER MEMBERS were Walter Prather, Kenneth Bright and Carlos Gaffin Prather and Bright were soloists. Poston and his wife were heard in duets.

Second quartet, which presented numbers in a lighter vein, was headed by Cleon Tucker and was rounded out by N. M. Brown, Walter Kinney and J. R. Sherwood.

Topper of the program was a series of pantomimes presented to Spike Jones recording by Sonny Adams and Harold Keller.

Directing musical numbers

was Richard Farmer who heads the Logan Waltonian chorus.

Dear Milk Shipper:

The men who did such a nice job of whitewashing Cow Stables and Poultry Houses for our producers last year will be here again, Monday and Tuesday, July 5 and 6.

If you have whitewashing for them to do, please write to us at once by post card and be sure to mention the number of stalls and other buildings you want them to do.

The cost will likely be slightly higher than last years price of 50c per stall... sprayed on. They will spray with D. D. T. too... reasonably.

Yours very truly,

All of which is strictly a preface to a pitch I want to make about a brand new double play combination that the Indians have arranged for devotees of the Doubleday game.

We have worked out a deal with Bob Joyce, General Manager of the Hotel Hollenden (one of Cleveland's largest and best known Inns) whereby baseball fans are guaranteed room reservations any weekend during the season—and at reduced rates. But that's not all... to save time and trouble, you can get your baseball tickets and hotel reservations by writing only ONE letter. Here's how it works:

All you have to do is fill in the two coupons below, the second, for room reservations. Then make out your check to the CLEVELAND INDIANS for the BASEBALL TICKETS ONLY. Attach your check to BOTH coupons and mail the works to: BOB JOYCE, General Manager, Hotel Hollenden, Cleveland 14, Ohio.

Before you can say "Eddie Robinson," Bob will send you your tickets and a confirmation of your hotel reservation.

It's as simple as all that—and you save time, money and are assured of hotel reservations—not to mention swell seats at the game.

Incidentally, the Hollenden is only a "Texas Leaguer" from the Stadium. You can walk in in eight minutes!

HERE'S THE TRIBE'S WEEK END HOME SCHEDULE FOR JULY AND AUGUST:

Kiwanians Hear Logan Quartets At Country Club

Representing one of the largest turnouts in many months, Circleville Kiwanis Club Monday evening held one of its periodical "ladies' nights" and treated the fairer sex with a chicken dinner and a musical program at Pickaway Country Club.

Featured were entertainers of Logan Kiwanis Club who brought along a double male quartet of the Logan Isaac Walton League chorus.

The program was virtually the same which the Hocking County organization presented early in May in an exchange program between the two clubs.

Monday evening's program featured two separate quartets which later combined. Between numbers, various solos were presented. The program was directed by Ralph Poston, baritone on the first quartet.

OTHER MEMBERS were Walter Prather, Kenneth Bright and Carlos Gaffin Prather and Bright were soloists. Poston and his wife were heard in duets.

Second quartet, which presented numbers in a lighter vein, was headed by Cleon Tucker and was rounded out by N. M. Brown, Walter Kinney and J. R. Sherwood.

Topper of the program was a series of pantomimes presented to Spike Jones recording by Sonny Adams and Harold Keller.

Directing musical numbers

was Richard Farmer who heads the Logan Waltonian chorus.

Dear Milk Shipper:

The men who did such a nice job of whitewashing Cow Stables and Poultry Houses for our producers last year will be here again, Monday and Tuesday, July 5 and 6.

If you have whitewashing for them to do, please write to us at once by post card and be sure to mention the number of stalls and other buildings you want them to do.

The cost will likely be slightly higher than last years price of 50c per stall... sprayed on. They will spray with D. D. T. too... reasonably.

Yours very truly,

Pickaway Dairy Co-op Ass'n.

Circleville, Ohio.

Bill Veeck SAYS...

Have you heard the one about the horse who wandered into the ball park during batting practice and asked if he could hit a few balls? The manager was slightly surprised but he waved the horse into the batter's box and the plug proceeded to slam booming drives into the bleachers.

Came the ninth inning of the game that afternoon... the home team was three runs down but had the bats loaded... with the pitcher coming up! In desperation, the manager sent our equine resident in to punch hit and he promptly drove the first ball deep into left center. There was a tremendous roar from the crowd but much to everybody's consternation, the horse just stood at the plate while the manager screamed, "Run! Run!" to which the horse replied, "Look, Lou, if I could run I'd be at Belmont!"

Say, by the way, a couple of weeks ago in this column I told you fellows about the snappy "double play" combination reservation deal we have arranged with the Hotel Hollenden in Circleville. The fans' response to it has been so terrific that I would like to repeat it again:

All of which is strictly a preface to a pitch I want to make about a brand new double play combination that the Indians have arranged for devotees of the Doubleplay game.

We have worked out a deal with Bob Joyce, General Manager of the Hotel Hollenden (one of Cleveland's largest and best known Inns) whereby baseball fans are guaranteed room reservations any weekend during the season—and at reduced rates. But that's not all... to save time and trouble, you can get your baseball tickets and hotel reservations by writing only ONE letter. Here's how it works:

All you have to do is fill in the two coupons below: one is for your baseball tickets, the second, for room reservations. Then make out your check to the CLEVELAND INDIANS for the BASEBALL TICKETS ONLY. Attach your check to BOTH coupons and mail the works to: BOB JOYCE, General Manager, Hotel Hollenden, Cleveland 14, Ohio.

Before you can say "Eddie Robinson," Bob will send you your tickets and a confirmation of your hotel reservation.

It's as simple as all that—and you save time, money and are assured of hotel reservations—not to mention swell seats at the game.

Incidentally, the Hollenden is only a "Texas Leaguer" from the Stadium. You can walk in it eight minutes!
